Credit Unions are Essential Services

In an effort to stop the spread of COVID-19, Governor Mills issued a new executive order announcing expanded restrictions on non-essential businesses. Fortunately, credit unions and banks are categorized as essential businesses, which means we can continue to operate as long as we continue adhering to social distancing recommendations. Following the CDC's social distancing guidelines is an important way to prevent the spread of COVID-19 in our community.

Our credit union wants you to remain healthy! We encourage you to practice your own preventative measures to reduce your own risk of infection. For more information on what you can do to protect yourself from COVID-19, please visit the CDC's website.

If you have questions concerning our operations during this time, or if you need assistance with any of your credit union accounts, please don't hesitate to contact us at X. Our Member Services Representatives are available to help. In addition, our drive-thru are open for business.

NorState's Drive-Thru hours of operation at each location can be found on our website <https://www.norstatefcu.org/about/branch-locations.htm>
